The event

To mark the 100th anniversary of the Austrian Society for Traffic & Transport Science (ÖVG), the 24th European Transport Congress will take place in Vienna in 2026 – an international meeting place for experts from transport, infrastructure, science, politics and business.

The two-day event in the Kuppelsaal of TU Wien combines keynote speeches by international personalities, high-caliber panels and scientific contributions from all over Europe.

The first thematic block addresses the tension between skills shortages and diversity – featuring an inspiring keynote address and a discussion with leading representatives from the railway, industry, and administration. Subsequent sessions will focus on scientific contributions related to climate change and resilience, as well as maintenance and availability, before the topic of geopolitical change shifts the focus to global developments and strategic dependencies.

The event will be rounded off by the big 100th anniversary celebration in the Remise Wien as well as thematic excursions on May 8th, which will provide insights into key transport systems and critical infrastructure.

The conference sees itself as a platform for exchange, knowledge transfer and international cooperation – and as a central meeting point for all those who want to actively shape the mobility of the future.
